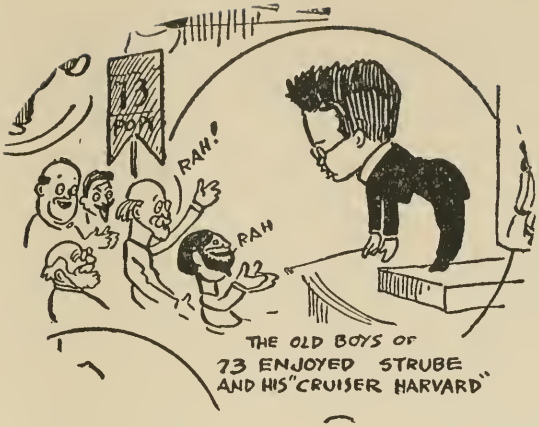
Assistant Class Secretary.

JAMES AUGUSTUS BEATLEY.



CLASSMATES: — The above libel was published in a Boston paper on the morning after graduates' night at the popular concerts in 1903. The portraits will be readily recognized as those of Forster, Beatley, Nason, White, and Ware. Upon this occasion the Class was the oldest of those present, and as such it received vociferous recognition from its juniors.

Since the publication of the preceding report in 1898, the Class has lost eight of its members: Rand, H. G. Hubbard, Angell, Jones, Stackpole, Kebler, Russell, and Barker. In addition to these, one temporary member, Tyler, has died. Four men — Fisk, Kilby, Lewis, and Watson — have married. The children of the class number two hundred and twenty-four, and the grandchildren five, the grandfathers being Babcock, Stone, Thomas, Pitkin, and Simmons.

At the annual meeting at Commencement, 1897, the suggestion was made that the Class signalize its twenty-fifth anniversary of graduation the following year by a gift to the College. As the result of the discussion which followed, it was voted that a committee of five be appointed by the secretary, who should take preliminary steps in the matter and report back to the Class. This committee consisted of Daland, E. S. Dodge, Nason, Olmstead, and the secretary.

The first points for settlement seemed to be the form which the proposed gift should assume, and the amount of money the members of the Class would subscribe for the purpose. As only a few were present at the meeting of 1897, and as it was felt that an expression of opinion from the whole Class should be obtained, a circular was issued Jan. 24, 1898, asking for the views of the Class on the subject and for subscriptions to carry out the project. As indicated by the answers to this circular, the preference of the majority was for a gate, and $1,500 was pledged for its erection.

With this endorsement, the committee proceeded along the lines indicated and, after conferring with President Eliot, selected as a site the entrance to yard opposite the Porcellian Club. Four Boston architects were invited to submit competitive plans for a simple gate, which should cost $3,000, and the Class was asked, in a circular of March 23, 1898, to increase its subscription of $1,500 to that amount.

As the final choice of a design lay with the Corporation, the drawings submitted by the competing architects were placed in the hands of the President and Fellows for their decision. This was to the effect that none of the designs were approved. It was further communicated to the committee that the Corporation had decided that the project of a gate should be postponed. Other classes had intimated a desire to give gates, as their respective anniversaries came round, and the Corporation feared a heterogeneous collection of such objects, which would be at once undesirable and inartistic. The committee was informed that the matter had been placed in the hands of an architect who was to evolve a scheme by which the recurring gifts of gates by the classes should form parts of a harmonious whole.

Acting upon this information, the committee ceased from its labors until such a time as it was thought that the architect appointed by the Corporation might have completed his comprehensive plans. Upon re-opening the matter with the Corporation, it was found that the site originally chosen by the committee had been given to another class and, further, that all the entrances to the yard had been apportioned to classes which had notified the Corporation of their intention to erect gates. The only space unappropriated was a stretch of two or three hundred feet of fence, which included a masonry tablet, opposite College House, and with this the committee had to be content.

It is to be regretted that a misunderstanding between the Corporation and the committee resulted in the loss to the Class of the site originally selected, and the appropriation by other classes of all other entrances to the yard.

The cost of the fence and tablet was $4,465.62. This is the amount paid the architects and contractors, and is exclusive of sundry items for postage and printing.

In a publication of this kind it is to be expected that some errors and omissions should exist. To the end that his records may be correct and brought up to date, the secretary requests that any mistake may be brought to his notice.

The eighth report is herewith submitted to the Class.

ARTHUR L. WARE,
Class Secretary.

Class of 1873.

*CALVIN EDWARD ABBOTT.
Died at Cambridge, Sept. 2, 1873.

CHARLES DAY ADAMS.
Continues the practice of law in Boston.

*LOWELL DOUGLASS ALLEN.
Died at Manchester, N.H., Dec. 23, 1891.

*ELGIN ADELBERT ANGELL.

He was lost at sea July 4, 1898. The week previous to his death he had attended the twenty-fifth anniversary of the graduation of the Class and had spoken at the dinner. A day or two later he sailed from New York for Europe, with the intention of taking a much-needed holiday in the company of his wife and child, who had been some months abroad. The ship in which he was travelling, "La Bourgogne," collided with another steamship when only a day out of port, and Angell, together with many others, was lost. His wife and two children survive him.

Angell was born Aug. 14, 1849, at the Angell settlement, so-called, near Forestville, in Chatauqua County, New York. His parents were Cyrus D. and Lucina (Shepard) Angell. He was descended from RogerWilliams, through his daughter, and from Thomas Angell, a Crown Commissioner for the settlement of Rhode Island. Angell's preparatory-school work was done at Forestville and at Adelbert Academy, Belleville, Ont. After graduating at Harvard he entered the Harvard Law School in 1873, and received the degree of LL.B. in 1875, supporting himself during his course by tutoring, principally in mathematics. He then entered the law office of Gen. T. W. Sanderson at Youngstown, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar. In 1877 he went to Cleveland, and in 1884 formed a partnership with J. H. Webster, which continued until his death. In 1893 he was appointed by Governor McKinley one of four to form a commission to investigate the system of taxation in the State, and to modify it to meet the demands of the present. He was chosen by his associates to prepare the report of their labors, and the result was one of the most valuable monographs on the subject ever issued. Taxation became his favorite study, and he was the author of many articles treating of it. He was much interested in the equity side of his practice. In later life he took up the law of patents, and in this specialty attained a reputation second to none in the State.

At the Class dinner in June, 1899, the following tribute to Angell's memory was read by Macvane, and it was voted to spread the same on the Class records in place of the customary resolutions:

At our meeting and dinner last year we had the pleasure and help of our classmate Angell. He was on his way to Europe to join his wife and little daughter, whom he had not seen for nearly a year, and paused in his journey to take part in our twenty-fifth anniversary. He left us on Commencement evening in exuberant spirits at the prospect of spending a well-earned holiday with his family abroad. What followed is matter of public history — the black horror of ships in collision, the "Bourgogne" gone to the bottom, the name "E. A. Angell, Cleveland, Ohio," in her passenger list. We had greeted our classmate for the last time.

At this, our first meeting since the sad event, we take sorrowful note of our loss as a class by his death, and add our brief testimony to his worth. In his profession of the law he had become, by common consent of his brethren, one of the leading lawyers of Cleveland. In spite of physical hindrances that would have disheartened and soured many a man, he had won for himself a position of usefulness and honorable distinction. He carried into his business qualities of mind and heart that deserved success. He had good abilities, an acute perception, patient industry, excellent judgment, and a conscience which easily kept him free from the moral pitfalls to which lawyers are so peculiarly exposed. Perhaps more than even to these qualities his success was due to his largeness of heart, and a certain enthusiasm of affection for his friends and for everything good and righteous. Whatever he took in hand he did with all his might, never resting until he was sure that he had done the best possible thing for the particular case.

In one kind of legal practice his innate friendliness gave him great advantage; his first impulse, always, was to smooth out rather than fight out difficulties between men. When he found honest people at variance about their respective rights and claims, he tried to discover some feasible line of adjustment without litigation. And he had a reputation for skill and success in effecting settlements in such cases. Business men found him a valuable counsellor in business tangles, as well as an able counsellor at law. In the twenty years of his residence in Cleveland he had won a high position in the esteem of the best citizens; he had a name for public spirit and good judgment as to the management of public business. The city and State often called on him for services of a public sort, on commissions and in reform movements of various kinds. His work as a member of the Ohio Tax Commission received wide recognition among tax reformers all over the country.

To those who knew him as we his classmates did he was endeared by the overflowing goodness and sweetness of his nature. Many were his unrecorded acts of kindness and generosity, even to persons who had no natural claim on his liberality. One class of such favors the writer of these lines cannot forbear to mention, for it illustrates two sides of Angell's character: his large-heartedness and his love for Harvard. He was in the habit, after reaching an income which made this possible, of helping deserving young fellows to make their way through Harvard. He was himself the best type of a college man; he was a student to the end of his days, and he could think of no higher benefit to be conferred on any worthy young man than to be enabled to become a college man, especially a Harvard man. He was proud of his College and his Class; and his College and his Class have much reason to be proud of him and of his life record. Our Class has been hard hit in its shining marks.

FREDERIC FANNING AYER.

Nothing has been heard directly from him since graduation. It is understood that he has large property interests in New York.

LEMUEL HOLLINGSWORTH BABCOCK.

"Am still practising law. I have not served my country in any office, have written nothing concerning the woman question or the negro question, and it's safe to say I'm not in 'Who's Who.' I have not even read Professor Laughlin's big book on political economy."

THOMAS WILLIAMS BALDWIN.

Member of firm of F. C. Littlefield & Co., Boothbay Harbor, Me., whose business is that of supplying ice and bait to the New England fishing fleet, particularly that of Gloucester. Is president of the Baldwin Fish Co., which does a general fishing business and sends a fleet of fishermen to the banks. For the past eight years he has been a member of the local school committee and still holds that position. Served for two years as auditor of town accounts. Was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Boothbay Harbor in 1900, and has since served on the board of directors, acting for the first year as assistant cashier. Is also a member of the board of corporation of the Boothbay Savings Bank. For the past four years has been secretary of the Republican Town Committee, and at the last election was elected member of the State Legislature.

*WILLIAM TORREY BARKER.

Died from cancer at Jamaica Plain, Mass., Aug. 12, 1903. He was the son of Josiah and Elizabeth (Cushing) Barker, and was born at Hanover, Mass., Feb. 14, 1851. He was fitted for college at Phillips Andover Academy. After graduation he went to New York for the purpose of studying medicine, but was obliged to relinquish that pursuit owing to ill-health. He subsequently went into business as member of a firm interested in the paper trade, and thenceforth his commercial career was identified with paper and its manufacture. His sterling integrity and executive ability were early recognized by those with whom he was associated in business, and he was appointed to many offices of trust and responsibility by the Paper Trade Association and the National Board of Trade. A widow and six children survive him.

At the annual meeting of the class at Commencement, 1904, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That we have learned with sorrow of the death of our classmate, William Torrey Barker.

That we recall with affectionate pleasure his comradeship of our college days, when he took a rank among us in work and play which reflected credit on the Class. Frank, genial, light-hearted, his was a nature to win and maintain the regard and respect of his associates.

That we followed with interest the development of his maturer years, and that we here record our gratification that one of our number should leave behind him the record of a life devoted to the faithful discharge of duty.

That we extend to his widow and family our sympathy in their bereavement.

* CHARLES EDWIN BATCHELDER.

Died at sea, Sept. 4, 1894.

JAMES AUGUSTUS BEATLEY.

Still engaged in teaching French and German at the English High School in Boston. He was the originator of the school orchestra, which now numbers forty members, and continues to serve as its director. The School Committee has granted the same recognition to orchestral practice as to vocal music, viz.: one diploma point. His orchestration of "Paul Revere's Ride" was performed by the orchestra at the Old South Meeting House on Patriots' Day in 1903. The orchestra has played at the same place and at Faneuil Hall upon other occasions. He played at the football games with Pennsylvania and Yale in 1900 and 1901 — in the band. Harvard won. He directed the first piece played in the band-stand at the Harvard Union at Commencement, 1900, and was invited to officiate as drum-major for the procession to the overflow meeting at Commencement, 1902. He is the only American member of the Boylston Schul Verein, a club composed wholly of Germans. Upon invitation he has spoken at the New England Association of Modern Languages.

WILLIAM APPLETON BELL.

Is still practising medicine at Somerville, Mass., "working hard and growing older."

EDWARD DETRAZ BETTENS.

Reports that he is still helping to take care of his brother's bulldog. The address of a down-town office-building in New York on his letter-head points to an additional and perhaps less congenial occupation.

FRANK HAGAR BIGELOW.

"Since 1898 I have continued to hold my three positions in Washington, D.C., as Professor of Meteorology, U.S. Weather Bureau; Professor of Astrophysics, George Washington University; and Assistant Minister at St. John's Church. The scientific research work upon which I have been engaged has made very satisfactory progress, and the subject of Solar Physics in connection with Meteorology is receiving increased attention both in Europe and America. The Weather Bureau is organizing an extensive research observatory at Bluemont, Va., on the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and we expect to be able to make greater advances when the building and equipment are completed. I made observations at the total eclipse of the sun in South Carolina, May, 1900, and I am going on the expedition to Spain and Africa for the eclipse of August, 1905. They have given me an honorary degree, L.H.D., and I have become a member of several societies and commissions interested in the lines of science with which my work has been associated. My publications, papers, and large reports now make more than a hundred titles, and the prospect is that I shall be able to add to this catalogue."

EDWARD PENNIMAN BLISS.

Continues in business in Boston. In 1900 and 1904 he went abroad, visiting Greece upon both occasions.

*JOHN COFFIN JONES BROWN, JR.

Died at Boston, Oct. 3, 1876.

JOHN BRYANT.

"Have neither got divorced nor married nor had any more children nor anything else except lose money since last fall."

COLLINSON PIERREPONT EDWARDS BURGWYN.

Engaged in his profession of consulting engineer at Richmond, Va. In addition to the account of his work detailed in the last report, he has carried out the following contracts with the United States Government: for the removal of large quantities of material from Cape Fear River, N.C.; for the removal of five million cubic yards of material in order to make channel to City of Baltimore thirty-two feet deep; for several thousand shot and shell; for building Lightship No. 74 off Cape Elizabeth, Portland Harbor, Me.; for building ocean-going hydraulic steamer "General Abbot;" for deepening channel entrance and harbor of Charlestown, S.C. He is also hydraulic engineer of the Old Dominion Iron and Nail Works, and chief engineer of the Richmond and Chesapeake Bay Railway Company.

HARRY BURNETT.

Continues in business at Boston as manufacturing chemist. Is treasurer of St. Mark's School at Southboro, Mass.

* CHARLES PEARSON BUTTON.

Died at Milwaukee, May 7, 1897.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN CHENEY.

Still engaged in the active duties of his profession as rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd at Walnut Hill, Dedham, Mass. Has made occasional visits to Europe, California, and other places, and is at present abroad.

ALFRED GAYLORD CHURCH.

Practising law at Meadville, Pa.

* FREDERIC HERBERT COPELAND.

Died in Boston in 1882.

* HENRY SPENCER CRAM.

Died at Cairo, Egypt, March 15, 1895.

JAMES GREENLEAF CROSWELL.

Since the last report has been continuously occupied as the head master of the Brearly School in New York.

TUCKER DALAND.

Has been for the past year in Europe with his family, where he still is.

ROBERT ALEXANDER BARNARD DAYTON.

Practising law in New York.

* ROBERT DICKEY.

Died in New York, October, 1879.

EDWARD SHERMAN DODGE.

Still practising law in Boston. He was married to Mary S. Stevens, July 3, 1894.

JOSHUA CLEVES DODGE.

Nothing heard directly from him since graduation. It is understood that he has lived in France uninterruptedly.

WILLIAM BRADFORD HOMER DOWSE.

Has given up the practice of law as business interests demand all his time. He is president of the United States Fastener Company, the Booth Manufacturing Company, the Reed and Barton Corporation, and the Consolidated Fastener Company. Is also vice-president and chairman of the house-committee of the Brae Burn Country Club at Newton, Mass. Went abroad last year.

WILLIAM LAWRENCE EATON.

Completes this year his thirtieth year of continuous service as principal of the High School at Concord, Mass., and his nineteenth year as Superintendent of Schools in that town. Two of his sons graduated at Harvard in 1900 and 1904, respectively, and a third graduates in 1907. His daughter Margaret died in July, 1904.

JOHN ALBERT ESTABROOKS.

In 1894 he purchased a tract of forest land at Lynn, N.C., among the Blue Ridge Mountains, and has passed six winters there, studying and applying the principles of forestry, in which he is much interested. An address on this subject delivered before the Lanier Club of Tryon, N.C., met with a flattering reception. The State Forester asked for a report, and the local press commended his work in general as an object lesson for the community.

OLIVER HURD EVERETT.

As for the past twenty-five years is practising medicine in Worcester, Mass., but "bells and telephones don't get me out at night as easily as they used to do." Has been president of the District Medical Society and is president of the Worcester Club. His daughter is in her last year at boarding-school, and his son, in his third year at St. Mark's, will take his preliminaries at Harvard this month.

FREDERIC GETMAN FINCKE.

Practising law in Utica, N.Y. His son graduated at Harvard in 1901. His daughter was married in 1902, and in the same year his wife died.

LYMAN BEECHER FISK.

Continues to hold the position of auditor of the Harvard Dining Association, with office in Memorial Hall. He was married to Adelaide A. Chase, of Cambridge, Aug. 11, 1903.

* WILLIAM JOHN GORDON FOGG.

Died in Boston, Feb. 27, 1894.

FREDERIC PRENTISS FORSTER.

Practising law in New York. He has a daughter at Bryn Mawr, and two sons at Groton.

ALFRED DWIGHT FOSTER.

Has practically ceased the practice of law, and has drifted into corporation management. Is vice-president of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, president of the Boston and Northwest Real Estate Company, trustee of the Boston Ground Rent Trust and the Western Real Estate Trust, and director in the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, the State Street Trust Company, the State National Bank, the Norwich & Worcester Railroad Company, and the Worcester Consolidated Street Railroad. A daughter, Evelyn Lucy, was born Jan. 2, 1900.

FRANK HUGH FOSTER.

Nothing heard from him. It is understood that he has resigned his position at the Theological School in Oakland, Cal., and is now living in Springfield, Mass.

SAMUEL WILLIAM FRENCH.

Continues the active practice of medicine in Milwaukee, where his work is that of a general practitioner, but with a strong preference for surgery. He has been a leader in the organization and promotion of many medical institutions. "In enumerating these I don't pretend to have been 'the only one,' but I know I was the spark that kindled the flame. It was but a transplantation of eastern ideas, and I was the first importation into this city who was determined to build up the profession and the medical institutions on broader lines." The results of his energy and enterprise are shown in the Elms Hospital for Women, the Milwaukee Medical Library and Society, of which he was for seven years the president, the Wisconsin Training School for Nurses, the Nurses' Registry, and the Johnson Emergency Hospital. He served for eight years on the surgical staff and board of directors of the last-named institution. He has been first vice-president of the Wisconsin State Medical Society, and anniversary chairman; president of the Milwaukee County Medical Society; chief State medical examiner for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Boston; president of the Milwaukee Harvard Club; Master of Masonic Lodge; president of Masonic Choir; president of the A. M. P. O. Medical Fraternity; prelate of Ivanhoe Commandery of Knights Templar; played Hamlet. He took the drill corps of his Commandery to San Francisco in 1904, and returned with an $1,800 trophy. He has a collection of some two thousand book-plates, and would be happy to exchange with any classmate. He has delivered a public lecture upon this subject. He is interested in the study of ancient Egypt, Assyria, and Grecian Archæology, and has delivered a lecture on the Shrine of Asklepios at Epidaurus and the Ancient Ritual. His daughter is at the Curry School of Expression in Boston, and a son is about to enter the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is "aware that the years are flying past, not only from the present chronology of events, but also from the fact that I am wrestling with my third set of teeth."

JOSEPH EVERETT GARLAND.

Practising medicine in Gloucester, Mass.

FRANK EDWARD GAVIN.

In 1892 was appointed Judge of the Appellate Court of the State of Indiana, and served four years. Resuming active practice, he moved to Indianapolis and organized a law firm, of which his son has for some years been a partner. Last fall he was Democratic candidate for the Supreme Court, but the State went Republican. In 1892 he was elected Grand Junior Warden of the Grand Lodge, F. and A. M., of Indiana, and in 1894 was elected Grand Master. He has been for several years president of the Board of Trustees of this lodge, and Chairman of the Committee on Grievances and Appeals. In 1903–4 he was President of the Associated Harvard Clubs, whose meeting in St. Louis in 1904 was attended by President Eliot. This Association is composed of the Clubs of Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Denver, Seattle, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Indianapolis, and some others. It is regarded as a potent factor in keeping alive the Harvard spirit in the West. He has for years been treasurer of the State Bar Association, and is "at this time looking forward with very great anticipation to having our Simmons here to deliver the annual address this year."

CHARLES NEWTON GOODRICH.

In real estate business in Boston.

ROBERT GRANT.

In 1893 was appointed Judge of the Probate Court and Court of Insolvency for Suffolk County, Massachusetts. In 1895 elected an Overseer at Harvard College, and re-elected in 1901. Was Chief Marshal at Commencement, 1898. Continues his literary activity, and since the last Class report has published "Unleavened Bread," subsequently dramatized, "The Undercurrent," and "The Orchid." Is a member of the American Institute of Arts and Letters. Three of his four boys are at Harvard in the classes of 1906, 1907, 1908 respectively. Is addicted to golf, but in the "duffer class."

WILLIAM MANSFIELD GROTON.

Was one of the deputies from Rhode Island to the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in 1895 and 1898. Appointed Church of the Holy Trinity Professor of Systematic Divinity in the Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia in 1898. Made Dean of the School in 1900. Is a member of the Standing Committee of Pennsylvania.

ELISHA GUNN.

Has been living in Springfield, Mass., since last report, but has no information of interest to furnish.

* CHARLES ABNER HAM.

Died in 1882.

HENRY HARRISON HAYNES.

Took Ph.D. degree at Harvard in 1899, and for a year was instructor in the Semitic languages at Stanford University and Professor of Old Testament Languages and Literature in the Church Divinity School at San Mateo, Cal. For the past five years he has been instructor at Harvard in the Semitic Department.

WALTER CLINTON HILL.

Nothing heard from him since last report when he was living in Brooklyn, N.Y., and engaged in teaching and studying.

OCTAVIUS THORNDIKE HOWE.

Continues the practice of medicine at Lawrence, Mass., but is "gradually throwing off the load." Has resigned from active duty at the hospital, and given up the position of Medical Examiner of Essex County.

FRANK ALLEN HUBBARD.

Is still practising medicine at Taunton, Mass. Three children have been born since the last report: Jennie E.,

Jan. 23, 1899, Helen W., Nov. 24, 1901, and Edward, Feb. 7, 1905.

* HENRY GUERNSEY HUBBARD.

Died at Crescent City, Fla., Jan. 18, 1899. He was born May 6, 1850, and from early boyhood developed a remarkable interest in Natural History. During his college course his studies were directed toward that branch of science, and his pleasures and recreations were always chosen with a view of getting close to nature. With this one absorbing passion ever in his mind, it was but natural that his life-work should be directed toward the same end. After graduation he remained in Cambridge as a special student in his favorite subject, and during that time he enjoyed the friendship and encouragement of Louis Agassiz and Asa Gray, which were of inestimable value to the young scientist. This period of his career he devoted more especially to investigating the hibernating quarters of the Coleoptera near Cambridge, turning up species theretofore undreamed of, and forming a collection which he subsequently presented to the Cambridge Museum under the name of the "Winter Collection." After completing his Cambridge work he transferred the field of his investigations to Michigan, and subsequently to Florida, in the process of which he achieved such remarkable results as to place him among the great entomologists of the world. He later studied the Lake Superior region with a success which was flattering to himself and of great value to the cause he represented. In 1879 he was engaged under Professor Shaler as the naturalist of the State Geological Survey of Kentucky, among other matters exploring the Mammoth Cave and making known its peculiar fauna of blind insects. In 1879 he became the owner of a tract of land near Crescent City, Fla., and from that time his pursuits and interests turned to horticulture in various forms. In the report furnished the class secretary at this time he describes himself as a "truck-farmer," but he soon won a wide reputation as a horticulturist and scientific investigator of the economics of orange culture, his discoveries and inventions practically revolutionizing that industry. In this connection he gave much study to insects injurious to the growth of oranges and of cotton. Among the experiments carried on under his supervision was one for the acclimation of West Indian and other tropical plants. At times he turned back for a brief space to his old interests, and at such periods he investigated the fauna of the Hot Springs in the Yellowstone Park, the burrows made by the Florida land-tortoise or gopher, in the prosecution of which a totally new fauna was discovered, and made other research along scientific lines. In 1896 the state of his health compelled him to pass the winter in Arizona, where he studied the giant cactus and found in it a mine of unsuspected fauna. He wrote much and lucidly on his chosen subjects, and his addresses and papers had the unusual quality of interesting the general public as distinguished from the scientists to whom they were more particularly directed. A widow survives him.

EDWARD CUNNINGHAM INGALLS.

Has been since 1895 pastor of the First Congregational Church at Colchester, Conn. In 1890 he made a bicycle tour in Great Britain with F. H. Foster.

JAMES FREDERIC JACKSON.

In 1899 he was appointed chairman of the Massachusetts Railroad Commission and still holds that position, retaining at the same time his connection with his law firm in Fall River.

GEORGE HENRY JOHNSON.

Pastor of Union Congregational Church at Taunton, Mass. During his former residence in Lowell, Mass., he assisted in the formation of a Harvard Club, of which he was the vice-president until his removal from the city.

Is chaplain of the Robert Treat Paine Chapter of Sons of American Revolution. His oldest daughter graduated at Smith College in 1903, where her sister is at present an undergraduate.

JOHN WARREN JOHNSON.

Is president of the Woburn National Bank, Woburn, Mass.

* FREDERIC PRINCE JONES.

Died from paresis at Providence, R.I., Dec. 8, 1898. He was the son of William P. and Mary A. (Prince) Jones, and was born at Portsmouth, N.H., March 4, 1851. He was prepared for college at St. Paul's School, Concord, N.H., and during his course as an undergraduate took a prominent place in the college societies and clubs, and was chosen chief marshal of Class Day. After graduation he turned his attention to mercantile affairs and was for some years in the employ of Willett & Hamlin, importers of sugar in Boston. Later he became a member of the shipping firm of M. F. Pickering & Co., of Boston, in which house Wendell Goodwin, '74, was also a partner. After some years of business activity in Boston he removed to New York, and subsequently to Duluth, Minn., where he was identified with various enterprises until failing health compelled his retirement. He was unmarried. At the annual meeting, Commencement, 1899, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That while the Class has learned of the death of Frederic Prince Jones with profound regret, we can but rejoice that an end has come to the long years of sickness and suffering which were his portion through the inscrutable wisdom of Almighty God.

That in him we mourn the loss of one who was a leader among us in our undergraduate days.

That the lapse of time and change in conditions have not effaced the memory of the kindliness, the courtesy, and the many attributes of heart and mind by which he endeared himself to us in by-gone days.

That these resolutions be spread upon the records, and that a copy of the same be sent the family of the deceased with an expression of our profound sympathy.

* FREDERIC KEBLER.

Nothing was heard directly from him after graduation. It is understood that he studied medicine and practised in Cincinnati. He died at Waverly, Mass., Nov. 23, 1900.

CLARENCE ERSKINE KELLEY.

Principal of High School in Haverhill, Mass.

HENRY SHERMAN KILBY.

Is practising medicine in North Attleboro, Mass., and surrounding towns. His outside interests are botany and bicycling. He wheels about three thousand miles a year. He was married, June 20, 1899, to Mercy Eliza Francis of Taunton, Mass.

WILLIS ALBERT KINGSBURY.

Continues to hold office as Judge of First District Court, at South Framingham, Mass., and engaged in the practice of law.

JAMES LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN.

Since 1892 he has been Head Professor of the department of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. For some years he has been editor of the "Journal of Political Economy." He served on the Monetary Commission appointed by the Indianapolis Convention of Boards of Trade, in 1898, and was entrusted with the preparation of the report which appeared in a volume of six hundred and eight pages. In 1894 he was invited to prepare a currency law for Santo Domingo. The visit to the island on a special steamer, the negotiations with the government, the enactment of the law and its provisions, were subsequently published in the "Journal of Political Economy." In 1902 he published the first volume of a magnum opus on money. This volume, "The Principles of Money," will be followed by five succeeding volumes "when time is granted to finish them." In addition to this work he has written many books and articles treating of the various phases of his specialty in this and other countries.

WILLIAM CRANSTON LAWTON.

"Still Greek man at Adelphi College and Academy, Brooklyn, N.Y., giving also occasional courses in Dante and Italian. Also lecturing on American literature, Kipling's poetry, and various topics nearer up to date than Homer and Euripides. Have published nine books in as many years, the most laborious being Introductions to American (1902), Greek (1903), and Latin (1904) Literature. Just now am absorbed in the agitation for a strong college or university in Brooklyn, of which Adelphi hopes to be the nucleus. Am just printing a lay sermon: 'Can the Ideal College thrive in a great city?'" His elder son graduated at Columbia, in 1904, youngest in his class, and second in general strength tests, prominent in debating, chess, settlement work, botany, and "other curious accomplishments, even such useless things as Greek and archæology." His second boy is the best high jumper, quarter-mile runner, and general sprinter in the Academy, "with perhaps as much tincture of literary culture as a twentieth century gentleman may indulge." He is trying to save up enough to enable him to come to a Commencement before he grows too senile to travel.

ISAAC NEWTON LEWIS.

Writes that, "as counsel for towns and other busy clients he has been too much occupied to distinguish himself." Is at present engaged in organizing a cemetery of historic interest, and in the erection of a memorial receiving-tomb. Has delivered a few addresses, the more important being, "The influence of Harvard College on the early English settlements," and "The lives and public services of the Rev. Philips Payson and his family." The last-named, together with a history of his native town, Walpole, Mass., is in print. Is a life member of the American Historical Association of the Smithsonian Institute, and of the New England Historical Genealogical Society of Beacon Hill. On April 19, 1899, he married Etta A. Lewis of Monson, Mass.

CHARLES KING LEXOW.

Nothing heard from him since last report when he was practising law in New York.

JAMES OTIS LINCOLN.

It is supposed that he continues his connection with the Divinity School at San Mateo, Cal.

WILLIAM JAMES LLOYD.

Continued teaching in New York until three years ago, when the state of his wife's health necessitated his removal to the Adirondack region, where he is now living. Has no business or professional work.

ARTHUR HERBERT LOCKE.

No report made. At last accounts he was engaged in the ministry at Grand Rapids, Mich.

ELLIOT LORD.

"I observe that the smallest fly on the wheel of progress has the longest tale to unfold of what he has done for himself and the world at large. I shall try to clip my record to a more fitting size. In 1887 I joined the staff of the 'Boston Advertiser' as editorial writer, and soon became managing editor, and continued in that position until 1889, when I went to Duluth, Minn., to become editor and publisher of the 'Duluth Evening Herald.' I remained in Duluth for two years and a half, then, owing to the financial stringency caused by the Baring failure, the prospects of this speculative city were so clouded temporarily that I concluded to return to Boston, and for a season was on the staff of the 'Boston Herald.' Then I became interested in the printing and publishing business in Boston and continued this interest, serving, however, for two years as editor-in-chief of the 'Boston Traveler,' and subsequently being interested in the book publishing business. In 1898 I came to New York at the invitation of Mr. Henry Villard, then the chief owner of the 'New York Evening Post,' to undertake special work for that paper, and produced a series of articles on the great mining rushes of this country at the time of the Klondike excitement. The outbreak of the Spanish War prevented Mr. Villard's carrying through a plan in hand for a special department in the 'Post' under my charge, and I undertook editorial work for the Scientific Publishing Company, of New York City, producing after five years in association with Mr. Gardner F. Williams, general manager of the DeBeers Consolidated Mines, Limited, a history of the development of the diamond mines of South Africa, and of the part taken by Cecil Rhodes and his associates in the development of South Africa. This work was published by the Macmillan Company simultaneously in New York, London, and South Africa by special arrangement following the death of Mr. Richard P. Rothwell, president of the Scientific Publishing Company, and editor and publisher of the 'Engineering and Mining Journal.' After the publication of two editions of the work, I secured it for a subscription-book publishing company with which I am associated, Benjamin F. Buck & Company, of 106 Fifth Avenue, and our company is now producing a revised edition of this work, and a number of others, which I have been engaged in editing. Our most recent publication is 'The Italian in America,' one of a projected series treating of the different immigrant stocks that are making up the composite American. In the authorship of this work were associated with me Mr. John J. D. Trenor, chairman of the Immigration Committee of the National Board of Trade in 1904, and Dr. Samuel J. Barrows, secretary of the New York Prison Association. I am further interested in the recent incorporation of two companies for the development of patent inventions, which we hope to make of profit to somebody besides the patentees, and thus become an exception to the rule. Up to date we are still rainbow chasers. I perhaps ought to state that I consider the principal position that I have obtained to date is that of President of the Society of Partially Educated Fools, which has only seven members besides myself. Applications open to all members of our Class. We are all officers. No dues, and no assessments, and no treasurer, for acceptance of the office of treasurer disqualifies a man for membership."

GEORGE HINCKLEY LYMAN.

Has been for the past seven years Collector of Customs at Boston. Upon the occasion of the visit of a Greek man-of-war to that port he was decorated by the King of Greece with the Order of the Silver Cross of the Redeemer.

* JOSEPH LYMAN.

Died at Northampton, Mass., Sept. 6, 1883.

SILAS MARCUS MACVANE.

Professor of History at Harvard.

* AUSTIN AGNEW MARTIN.

Died at Boston, April 1, 1890.

THOMAS SCOTT MILLER.

Since 1875 has practised law at Dallas, Tex., excepting for two years, when he was Professor of Law at the University of Texas at Austin, Tex. Has had a large practice, and has been associated with some of the leading lawyers of the State. Has been for some years General Attorney of M. K. & T. Railway Company in Texas.

* WINTHROP MILLER.

Died at Minneapolis, Oct. 16, 1884.

CHARLES STURTEVANT MOORE.

Moved to Cambridge in October, 1899, and took up research work in psychology and education. Received degree of A.M. at Commencement, 1900. In 1902 declined Assistantship in Philosophy to accept present position of Assistant Recorder of Harvard College.

CLARENCE BLOOMFIELD MOORE.

In 1899 retired from business affairs, excepting those of a personal nature. Has been much interested in archæology, as detailed in the last Class report. Is corresponding member of the Royal Academy of Letters, History, and Antiquities, of Stockholm; member of the Philosophical Society of Philadelphia; Fellow of the American Association for Advancement of Science; member and honorary member of many learned societies. Has "remained a Protestant, a Republican, and a bachelor."

SAMUEL LORD MORISON.

It is understood that he is still in business in New York. His daughter was married in 1902.

JOHN MURDOCH.

Continues his work at the Boston Public Library. Has practically dropped out of scientific pursuits, but retains membership in several societies, so that his name got into "Who's Who in America," a distinction which he shares with two other members of the Class. Is interested in photography, and has exhibited a little, but is "not much of a prize-winner." His oldest boy made the Phi Beta at Harvard in the first eight, and now hopes to be on the nine to play the Yale Phi Beta this year.

RUFUS WILLIAM NASON.

Has been engaged in the practice of law in Boston since the last report. He has written a number of magazine articles, two short treatises on Roman law, which have been translated and published in France, and several essays on current topics. Is now engaged in compiling a law dictionary. His wife died Feb. 20, 1895.

EDWARD BEVERLY NELSON.

As for the past thirty years, he is Principal of the Central New York Institution for Deaf-Mutes at Rome, N.Y. Has served three terms on the municipal Board of Health, and was last year legislated out of office by a change in the city charter. His position brings him into close relationship with the State legislature and officials, and with the leading politicians of both parties. A daughter, Margaret Haswell Weld, was born Sept. 16, 1895. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, and a member of all the masonic bodies. For a year he was Potentate of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Ziyara Temple, Utica, N.Y. He belongs also to the Royal Arcanum, and to several large clubs in Rome, Syracuse, and Albany.

JAMES MONROE OLMSTEAD.

Until within a year or two he has continued in the active practice of law. In 1898 he was made a Referee in Bankruptcy for Suffolk County, Massachusetts, and is still in office. In 1901, as president of the National Association of Referees in Bankruptcy, he presided at the convention at Buffalo. In 1905 he was "a pretty good runner-up in the race for the new United States District Judgeship." In 1901 he went abroad, visiting Italy and Austria. His wife died in 1903.

HERBERT INGERSOLL ORDWAY.

Has had "change enough since last report, but not of the most agreeable kind." In 1898 his health broke down, and he spent two years at Colorado Springs with his family. The two succeeding years he passed in Colorado and California, and has since been able to remain at home the entire year. Has given up business in Boston after a partnership of twenty years, and his present occupation is playing golf eight months of the year, and wishing he could play the other four.

LOUIS SHREVE OSBORNE.

Continues to discharge the duties of Rector of Trinity Church, Newark, N.J.

CHARLES HARRISON OTIS.

Practising law in Brooklyn, N.Y.

FRANK PAUL.

Continues the practice of law in Boston.

HENRY ROCKEY PENDERY.

Was some years ago practising law in Leadville, Col.

GILBERT ABIEL ABBOTT PEVEY.

Engaged in the practice of law in Cambridge and Boston. In 1893 he was appointed city solicitor of Cambridge, and still holds that position. During his incumbency many important matters affecting the city's interests have been in his hands. Among these are the building of a large reservoir, the establishment and construction of a large city park, various matters in connection with the Metropolitan Park and Sewer System, and acts for Cambridge bridge, Charles River dam bridge, and the recent subway act.

DUDLEY LEAVITT PICKMAN.

Continues to reside in Boston, and has two sons at Harvard.

CHARLES ALFRED PITKIN.

Continues his connection with the Faculty of Thayer Academy, South Braintree, Mass. Has been Professor of Chemistry in Tufts College Dental School since its foundation in 1899. He has two married daughters, and "one thriving grandson aged two."

*EDWIN READ PRATT.

Died at Worcester, Mass., Oct. 31, 1880.

JOSEPH VILA PRICHARD.

Nothing has been heard from him.

CHARLES ALBERT PRINCE.

Has lived in France for some years.

WILLIAM ARCHER PURRINGTON.

Continues in the practice of law in New York. Is lecturer on "law in relation to medical practice" in University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College. Has written some addresses and periodical articles. Among these, two on Christian Science for the "North American Review" have been published under the title of "Christian Science, an exposition of Mrs. Eddy's wonderful discovery, including its legal aspects: a plea for children and other helpless sick."

*ELBRIDGE DWIGHT RAND.

Died near Hamilton, Ill., Feb. 8, 1897. He was the son of E. D. and Caroline A. (Sherfey) Rand, and was born at Burlington, Ia., Aug. 11, 1853. In 1868 he entered the freshman class at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., and in 1871 became a member of the junior class at Yale. A year later he came to Harvard and entered the Class of 1873 in its senior year. After graduation he went abroad for three years, and then returned to the West, where he was engaged in the lumber business in various places.

WALTER RAYMOND.

In 1900 the firm of Raymond and Whitcomb was incorporated, and he was made president. In 1902 he relinquished active connection with the company, and went to California to live. The Raymond Hotel at Pasadena, of which he was owner, was burned in 1895. In 1901 he rebuilt it and now resides in it. In 1903, in partnership with others, he leased the new hotel, the Colorado, at Glenwood Springs, Col. In 1893 he and a partner leased the Raymond and Whitcomb Grand Hotel at the World's Fair Grounds, Chicago, for the time of the fair. He joined the Harvard Club of Southern California in 1903. A son, Arthur Emmons, was born March 24, 1899.

* LUTHER CLARK REDFIELD.

Died at Somerville, Mass., May, 1877.

AMBROSE CROSBY RICHARDSON.

"Since the last report I have continued to reside in Buffalo, and to hold the position I held at that time, viz.: Teacher of Ancient Languages at the State Normal School. I have now been there nine and one-half years, which is the longest term of service in that department by any teacher since the foundation of the school in 1871. During all this time I have tried to keep my methods up to date, and to send out a series of teachers who could teach both Greek and Latin in the modern fashion. But an entire change in the Normal School course has just been made by the State Department of Education, which will eliminate my department entirely after about one more year, so that I must seek other employment soon. For several years previous to 1899, I had been urging, in the press and otherwise, the adoption of voting machines for our elections, which is permitted by the law of the State. The particular machine which I favored (without, however, having any pecuniary interest in it) was not adopted. But a much better one appeared later, and was adopted in season to be used for the first time in the election of November, 1899. It required one hundred and eight of them to equip the city, and this is the first time they were ever used on so large a scale. They more than met all expectations, and have been used ever since, to the great satisfaction of voters and election officers alike. We are now as sure of honest elections as it is possible to be, and no one would think of going back to the old system of separate paper ballots, with its far heavier expense and delays in the returns, offering unlimited chances for fraud. There are many who think that the adoption of the machines is largely due to my efforts; if this is true, it is the best piece of public service I ever did. In 1900 I made a trip up the Great Lakes to Duluth, and thence to the Yellowstone National Park, amid whose wonders and beauties I spent ten days. I had hoped to make the circuit of the Park (about one hundred and fifty miles) by bicycle, and took my wheel along for the purpose, but the weather was so dry and the roads so sandy that I was unable to do so, and had to make the greater part of the trip in the teams of the Wylie Camping Company. But the wheel came in handy in visiting the cities on the lakes at which the boat stopped. I enjoy my wheel, by the way, just as much as I did twenty years ago, and seldom go out without it. 1901 is memorable in Buffalo as the Pan-American year. The months of the exhibition were a period of unending delight down to the day of President McKinley's assassination. The scene at dusk, when the lights were slowly turned on, was a perfect dream of fairyland, and something never to be forgotten. The summer of 1902 I spent mostly in New Hampshire, and in that of 1903 I made a trip to Grand Lake Stream in Maine to do a little salmon fishing, going from Albany, N.Y., to Calais, Me., entirely by water. It was little enough fishing I did, for out of the fourteen days I was there, eleven were rainy. On one of my excursions by canoe, however, I had the somewhat rare experience of catching and holding in my hands the young of a loon, while the mother-bird swam and splashed around us in great consternation, giving at the same time a concert of such wild and beautiful melody as I never dreamed could have come from a loon's throat. Later in the summer I went to Moosehead Lake, and from there made a trip by canoe down the west branch of the Penobscot River. This trip, however, was not much of a success. It was cold and so cloudy nearly all the time that I could get no good camera pictures of the game, of which I saw a good deal, and it also rained some part of nearly every day. I stayed over at one camp to climb Mt. Katahdin, but this excursion was also a failure, as the summit was wrapped in clouds so that not a thing could be seen. It was an eighteen-mile tramp and climb, and all the fun I had was the exercise. For the last three years my health has been such that my school work was all I could do, so that I have given up all public work except that of the Civil Service Reform Association, and an occasional visit to a boys' club at Neighborhood House, the social settlement maintained by the church of which I am a member. Besides this, I am a member of the Harvard Club of Buffalo, the University Club, the Buffalo Yacht Club, and Queen City Lodge, No. 358, F.A.M. I am still unmarried."

MAURICE HOWE RICHARDSON.

Reports himself as a "professional fisherman," and says that the thing in life which has interested him most in the past five years is that the fishing has been very good. His recreation is taken in the study and elucidation of certain surgical problems, connected chiefly with the gall-bladder, the pancreas, and the vermiform appendix. At the national convention of the American Surgical Association at Albany, N.Y., in June, 1902, he was elected president. Has been appointed full professor at Harvard. His oldest son is near the end of his medical course, and two others will enter Harvard next fall. A daughter is at Bryn Mawr.

*CHARLES THEODORE RUSSELL.

Died at Cambridge, Feb. 16, 1903. He was the son of Charles T. and Sarah E. (Ballister) Russell, and was born in Boston, April 20, 1851. After graduation he studied law in the office of his father and at the Boston Law School, and was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar in 1875, and to the Supreme Court of the United States in 1880. He was admitted to partnership in his father's firm and, upon its dissolution, continued the business of the office in connection with his brother, the late Governor Russell. In 1884 he was appointed one of the Civil Service Commissioners of Massachusetts, and in 1889 became chairman of that body. In 1896 he was elected Professor of the Law of Admiralty and Shipping in the Boston Law School. For several years he had been a member of the Board of Examiners for Admission to the Suffolk Bar, and, by appointment of the State, had edited and published for the use of the Legislature reports upon contested cases. In addition to a large practice, more particularly in admiralty cases, he was identified with many corporations, charities, and trusts. In recent years an affection of the vocal chords had impaired his voice and caused his gradual withdrawal from the active practice of his profession. He was unmarried.

At the annual meeting of the Class at Commencement, 1903, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That in the career of our classmate, Charles Theodore Russell, we recognize the maturity and fruition of those mental gifts which marked his academic course.

Called to a sphere of responsibility and usefulness in public and in private life, he acquitted himself of the obligations thereby entailed with fidelity and conscientiousness. Laboring under a painful physical infirmity, which he bore with patient fortitude, and which seriously interfered with the practice of his profession, while depriving him of much of the enjoyment of social life, he gave himself the more unreservedly to the discharge of those duties which demanded the exercise of thought and action rather than words.

An upright man, a courteous gentleman, a public servant who has left his mark on our times, one for whose services the State is to-day and will long continue his debtor, whose place in the Commonwealth it will be difficult to fill, we, his classmates, desire to communicate to his family and to spread upon the Class records this tribute of appreciation of his character and worth.

JOHN OAKES SHAW.

Practising law in Boston.

JOSEPH MAURICE SHEAHAN.

Practising medicine at Quincy, Mass. Was married to Mary Louise Conway, on Feb. 10, 1892, at West Quincy, Mass.

FRANCIS BAXTER SHEPLEY.

Nothing heard from him. Was at last accounts connected with the Fitchburg railroad, and living at Concord, Mass.

GEORGE LANGDON SHOREY.

It is understood that he is in business at Lynn, Mass.

JOHN FRANKLIN SIMMONS.

Engaged in practising law in Boston. Is writing a portion of the history of his native town, Hanover, Mass., at the request of the committee of the town. Has one grandchild, Thalia Simmons, daughter of his son Henry Franklin Simmons. Passed part of year 1889 in Europe recovering from an attack of typhoid fever.

* FREEMAN SNOW.

Died at Nelson, Pa., Sept. 11, 1894.

* FREDERIC DABNEY STACKPOLE.

Died at Roxbury, Mass., Dec. 26, 1899. He was the son of John W. G. and Emmeline (Dabney) Stackpole, and was born at Pomeroy, Ohio, July 19, 1849. His earlier education was prosecuted at the public schools of his native town, and he was prepared for college by private instructors there and at Cincinnati. Immediately upon graduation, he went to Pomeroy, where he studied medicine in a doctor's office for a year, when he returned to Boston and entered the Medical School. He subsequently passed two years in Europe, and at the end of that time came home and took his M.D. degree in 1878. He practised in Boston for ten years, and then removed to Roxbury where he continued the active exercise of his profession until his death. For some years he was librarian of Boston University School of Medicine. His wife survives him.

The following is taken from a Boston paper:

A singularly estimable and useful life is ended in the death of Dr. Frederic Dabney Stackpole of the Roxbury district in this city. Dr. Stackpole was a man of rare refinement and amiability of character. Thoroughly educated and skilled in his profession, his loss will be felt by many to whom he had ministered as the good physician. He was largely interested in philanthropic work also, to which much of his time was devoted. It was his habit to seek out cases of suffering from poverty, and to take steps to aid the worthy. Numbers of this class will miss him as a kind and sympathizing friend. He practised his profession more for the opportunities of this kind that it afforded him than for the purpose of realizing pecuniary remuneration from it, which, fortunately, he did not need. He will be much missed and mourned by a large circle of those who appreciated his estimable qualities.

At the annual meeting of the Class at Commencement, 1900, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That in taking action on the death of Frederic Dabney Stackpole the Class records the sense of its own loss, and that of the community in which he was long identified with works of charity and of practical Christianity.

That it is a source of pride and gratification to the Class that one of its number should have so unstintedly contributed to the well-being of the sick and needy, giving freely and without return of his professional skill and private means, visiting in their affliction the widow and the fatherless, and with ever ready sympathy and counsel doing what he might to ease the burden of his less fortunate brothers. Carrying to the bed-side of the sick and suffering and into the home of hopeless and disconsolate the same simplicity and cheery temperament which characterized him in his undergraduate days, he passed his life in deeds of charity and unselfishness, limited only by his failing strength. His death has left vacant a place in the community which can with difficulty be filled.

That the Class extends to his widow its deep-felt sympathy in her bereavement.

*HENRY BALDWIN STONE.

Died at Nonquit, Mass., July 5, 1897.

FREDERIC WASHINGTON STORY.

Practising law in Baltimore.

JOSEPH SKINNER SWAIM.

Continued the charge of the First Baptist Church at New Bedford, Mass., until 1904, when he became proprietor and editor in association with a friend of "The Watchman," the Baptist religious weekly of New England. His oldest son graduated at Harvard in 1901, and at the Law School in 1903, and is practising law in Boston. He was an oarsman in college, and rowed in many class and club races. His second son graduates this year. In his freshman year he was bow of his class crew, and occupied that position in the 'Varsity the next year. Illness has prevented his farther participation in rowing. A third son is in the present freshman class, and is also an oarsman. Two of his boys have required Dr. Maurice's attention for appendicitis.

MELVILLE HOWARD SWETT.

Nothing has been heard from him for many years.

*THOMAS NYE SWIFT.

Died at Providence, R.I., Jan. 25, 1893.

*CHARLES FRANCIS TARBELL.

Died at Lincoln, Mass., Oct. 31, 1891.

WILLIAM THOMAS.

Practising law in San Francisco, farming, and interested in various business enterprises: a fruit cannery, a hardware house, a hotel, a laundry, a bank, a trust company, a cattle ranch, and a telephone company — "and still poor." He was president of the University Club for two terms, and president of the Harvard Club for a like period. Two daughters and a son are married, and he is a "proud grandfather of four years' standing." Is still "California Bill" to all the boys.

*ALBERT HARRIS THOMPSON.

Died at Brookline, Mass., Dec. 7, 1891.

FREDERIC BACON TOWNSEND

Practising architecture in Chicago.

EDWARD PRESTON USHER.

Is president, treasurer, and general manager of the Grafton and Upton (Mass.) Railroad Company. He writes: "When we do not make a record personally, we are glad to think that the work of our sons counts in a sense as part of our own. My eldest son graduated summa cum laude at Harvard, secured the Ricardo Prize and the Washburn Prize, got his A.M. with summos honores in history, received a Rogers Fellowship for two years' study abroad, has been an assistant in History 10 this last year, and gets his Ph.D. this Commencement. My second son also graduated summa cum laude, and takes his A.M. this year. He has an article of forty pages in the May number of the 'Journal of Economics,' and has an appointment as instructor in Government 1 next year."

GEORGE GORHAM WALBACH.

Reports his life as monotonous and without incident of especial interest. Has made trips to Labrador and among the battlefields of the Civil War.

GRANT WALKER.

Engaged in business in Boston.

ARTHUR LOVELL WARE.

Was obliged to give up active business on account of a serious affection of the eyes a few years ago. Plays bridge not at all and golf badly. Had an ambition to beat Dowse at Pinehurst two winters ago, but did not dare tackle him. Is trying to lead the Simple Life, with indifferent success. His boy graduated at the Milton Academy in 1903, and, after a year's post-graduate course, entered the present freshman class at Harvard, and is a member of his class nine.

THOMAS BARNES WARREN.

Still practising law in the real estate line at Springfield, Mass., and is State Examiner of Titles under land registration act.

* ALFRED FOSTER WASHBURN.

Died at Cambridge, Mass., September, 1896.

THOMAS RUSSELL WATSON.

Is conducting the Old Colony Nurseries at Plymouth, Mass. Was married at Cambridge, Mass., July 25, 1901, to Frederica King Davis. Has two daughters.

EDWARD ROBBINS WHARTON.

Living at Lenox, Mass.

* GEORGE ROGERS WHEELOCK.

Died at Calistoga, Cal., March 25, 1897.

HORATIO STEVENS WHITE.

In May, 1901, he received a call to Harvard as Professor of German, which he accepted, and entered upon his duties in September, 1902. In 1901 he was abroad with his family, travelling in Italy, Switzerland, Germany, the Netherlands, and England. In 1901 he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from Glasgow University on the occasion of its four hundred and fiftieth anniversary, as a delegate from Cornell. During 1904–5 had leave of absence from Harvard to enable him, as an executor of the estate of Prof. Willard Fiske, to arrange the affairs of the estate in Florence, Italy. Mr. Fiske left a million dollars to endow the Cornell University Library, beside the best collection in the world on Petrarch and on Icelandic literature. These collections have been sent to the Cornell Library, and his home in Florence, the historic Villa Landor, has been sold with its contents, the proceeds being added to the same endowment fund. Interesting bequests were also made to the islands of Iceland and Grimsey. White's son, after a year at Cornell, entered Harvard, and finishes this year "as of 1906."

HENRY WHITTEMORE.

In 1898 he moved from New York to Watertown, N.Y., where he was engaged in business until 1901, when he returned to New York. He was interested in the iron and steel business there until 1904, operating rolling mills at Chester, Pa. He is now connected with the Fulton Furnace Company, of New York, and resides at Englewood, N.J. A son, Henry, Jr., was born Jan. 3, 1899.

GEORGE DUDLEY WILDES.

Practising law in Boston.

DAVID WELD WILLIAMS.

Continues in the practice of law in Boston.

ROBERT WHEELER WILLSON.

In 1898 was made Assistant Professor and in 1903 full Professor of Astronomy at Harvard. By Commencement he hopes to give to "an anxious public" a book on Laboratory Astronomy as a result of his teaching experience. In 1902 he secured the old Pudding building for an astronomical laboratory, where he is "prepared to turn out competent astronomers in the shortest possible time, starting from the very depths of ignorance."

CLASS MEETINGS.

June 28, 1898.

The Class celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its graduation this evening by a dinner at the University Club, Boston, sixty members being present. Jackson presided with a grace and dignity all his own.

The secretary gave a brief summary of the history of the Class, after which Simmons responded for the twenty-three whom death had removed from the ranks.

The secretary announced that flowers had been sent in the name of the Class to the wives or mothers of deceased members, as a token of the remembrance of the Class for its dead at the time of its jubilee anniversary.

A feature of the evening was the presentation by Willson to Chief Marshal Grant of a very large baton and a very small silk hat for use in his official capacity.

Poems were read by Grant and Osborne and a vote passed to have them printed and distributed to the Class.

A delegation from '72, with the customary bottle, visited the Class, and expressed sentiments appropriate to the occasion, a courtesy which was returned in kind later in the evening.

Remarks were made by Shumway, a former member of the Class, Barker, Fincke, Angell, and Macvane. Songs were sung by Beatley, Fincke, Daland, and others, Pevey presiding at the piano.

A * telegram of congratulation was sent to the Yale Class of '73, at the time, presumably, dining at New Haven.

The menu was in the form of an examination paper, and was bound in blue covers, reminiscent of the blank-books used for examination in the old days. Besides the menu,

* Subsequently returned with endorsement "not found."

the book contained many advertisements from members of the Class.

The notices of the dinner sent out to the Class were in the form of the old-time "summons to the Dean."

ARTHUR L. WARE,
Secretary.

June 29, 1898.

Holworthy 6 was open as usual to the Class to-day. A special car carried the members, sixty, from Boston to Cambridge, where a group was photographed behind the Library.

At the business meeting the secretary announced the deaths of Stone and Button, and the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That the Class has heard with profound regret of the death of Charles Pearson Button.

That it deplores the loss of an old friend and classmate, and extends to his family its deep sympathy.

That in the death of Henry Baldwin Stone the Class has lost one the achievements of whose later years were but the maturing of those qualities which, in our undergraduate days, marked him as one above the average in character and ability.

That in the career of usefulness that was his the Class has ever felt a deep personal interest, and that while rejoicing in the success which invariably crowned his efforts, the Class has ever experienced a pride that from its ranks went forth one so upright, so manly, and so true to his ideals.

That the profound sympathy of the Class goes out to his family.

It was voted that a copy of the above be sent to the families of the deceased.

A brief report was made by the secretary on the subject of the Class gate.

June 27, 1899.

The annual dinner was held to-day at the University Club, twenty-two members of the Class attending.

The enjoyment of the occasion was increased by the absence of the secretary, who sent word, endorsed by a physician's certificate, that he was too ill to participate in the time-hallowed rites of the evening. Dr. Richardson was delegated to send a prescriptive telegram to the departed.

An appreciative notice of Angell was read by Macvane, and adopted by the Class in place of the customary resolutions.

Remarks commemorative of H. G. Hubbard were made by M. H. Richardson, Dowse, and Story.

The following message was sent to the Class of '74 then celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of graduation:

To the Class of 1874, in commemoration of its silver wedding, the Class of 1873 extends its most cordial greetings.

Though '74 and silver have both lost much of their pristine prominence, may the members who can respond "Adsum" on this festive occasion be as 16 to 1.

May the numerous olive branches of your Class long continue to "whoop her up for '74."

The solemnity of the evening was later rudely disturbed by emissaries from '72 bearing a bottle rampant, who obviously mistook the nature of our gathering, and attempted to seduce the Class of 1873 from the paths of sobriety and rectitude.

This unhallowed example of our elders was subsequently followed by the Class of 1873, which, en masse, invaded the precincts of '72, preceded by a bottle, and followed by much song and revelry.

It is supposed that the meeting was properly adjourned, although no notice to that effect was given.

JAMES A. BEATLEY,
Assistant Secretary.

June 28, 1899.

The Class has its headquarters at Holworthy 6 to-day, where the diet prescribed by its Betters graced the board. The Fresh Pond water was pronounced excellent and probably free from bacteria. Resolutions upon the death of Frederic Prince Jones were passed.

(For resolutions see elsewhere in this report.)

The Class dined at the University Club this evening, twenty-nine members being present. The observance of the occasion was of the customary convivial nature.

After dinner a lengthy discussion was held in regard to the gate which it had been proposed to donate to Harvard, in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of graduation.

Sketches of gates were exhibited which had been submitted by four Boston architects in a competition at the invitation of the committee. It was noticed that the design favored by the committee met with the least approval from those at the dinner.

A special meeting of the Class was held to-day at the Parker House, the object being to choose a location for the section of the fence around the College yard.

A diagram was exhibited showing the spaces at the disposal of the Class. These are behind Holworthy, behind Holden Chapel, and adjoining the main gate opposite the church.

After some discussion the last-named site for section of fence and tablet was chosen.

The annual meeting of the Class was held to-day at Holworthy 6.

The secretary made a report on the progress of the construction of the fence and tablet which are to be completed during the autumn.

It was voted to authorize the secretary to borrow money or to draw on the interest of the Class Fund in anticipation of payment of amount pledged for the construction of the fence.

June 23, 1903.

The annual dinner at the University Club to-night commemorated the thirtieth anniversary of the graduation of the Class. Thirty-three members were present.

Speeches were made by White, Macvane, Jackson, Osborne, and Hawes, and songs sung by Daland, Willson, Murdoch, and Nason. An original song, "In President Eliot's time," was contributed by Beatley, and sung by all in unison from copies prepared for that purpose.

An excellent poem was read by Murdoch, and the secretary introduced the speakers with appropriate doggerel.

A message of greeting and cheer was sent to Barker, signed by all present, and expressing a hope for his speedy recovery from a dangerous illness.

The table was decorated by flowers sent by the widow and children of Winthrop Miller. In recognition of this kindly remembrance of the anniversary of the Class, it was voted:

That the secretary be instructed to express to Mrs. Miller our appreciation of her act in presenting the beautiful flowers to decorate our table upon the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary of our graduation.

That we regard them as commemorative of her late husband, our classmate and friend, for whose memory our affectionate regard has not been lessened by the passage of years.

The chief feature of the evening was the presentation to the secretary of a silver punch-bowl with ladle and salver, appropriately inscribed, from members of the Class, the presentation being made by Jackson. In accepting the gift, for which he was totally unprepared, the secretary said that he should regard it in no sense as a payment for the services which he had always rendered gladly to the Class, but would cherish it among his most valued possessions as a mark of esteem and affection from his classmates.

The meeting was farther signalized by the presentation to the secretary by Beatley of a pair of "President's suspenders" striped with Harvard crimson. The occasion for this was a remark recently made by the secretary to the effect that his conception of affluence and financial independence was to be in position where he could afford to own two pairs of suspenders at the same time, a luxury in which he had never been able to indulge.

The meeting adjourned at 11 o'clock after what had been perhaps the most enjoyable and successful dinner in the annals of the Class.

June 28, 1904.

The annual dinner took place to-night at the University Club, at which thirty-one were present.

Through the kindness of M. H. Richardson the Class was given a most entertaining stereopticon exhibition in which the portraits of every member of the Class, as they appeared at the date of graduation, were thrown upon the screen. Remarks upon the personal appearance of classmates thirty years ago were in order, and many unflattering comments were made. As judged by the standard of the present, the amount of hair worn by the youth of the early seventies was regarded as unnecessary and superfluous. Likenesses of "Delia" and "Nellie" were also shown and enthusiastically greeted by those to whom those hand-maidens had ministered at Commons.

The exhibition was followed by the seemly revelry of speech and song which characterizes the dinners of the Class, and the evening closed with a vote of thanks for the unique and entertaining show which had been provided.

Holworthy 6 was open as usual for the Class to-day.

At the business meeting resolutions upon the death of William Torrey Barker were adopted. (See elsewhere in this report.)
